padding all around. Note though that descenders and ascenders may distort the desired appearance, e.g. the Discounts sign is centred but clearly needs less padding at the bottom.

Translucent stencils are good for glass screens, also windows using Reverse lettering. The Solicitors stencil of Dickensian tenor is typical of what you might see in upper floor office windows. They advertise nicely, obscure the business, and let the light in. Crystal Etch; Black Chancery font.

ORIENTATION

To beat the plethora of horizontal signage, lettering on an arc are examples of both.

A smile is a curve that sets everything straight circumference is greatest for the top line of text and decreases therefore you can lay out more text on the longer arc.
